

Our October 2016 newsletter is out and has a wealth of information about current events and helpful resources. Here's what's in store for you:

We celebrate Open Access Week by sharing success stories about the impact of open access and its success in advancing knowledge, building reputation, and demonstrating achievements to the benefit of readers, authors, and institutions.

Two webinars are coming up, in which we discuss how to ensure accurate readership statistics and how to overcome the challenge of creating an institutional repository with limited resources. You can also find us at upcoming conferences around the country!

In addition to welcoming four new universities to the Digital Commons community, we've expanded our Scholarly Communications Experts Directory! Find the expert you need on topics such as repository management; supporting content, departments, and organizations; and managing SelectedWorks and Digital Commons.

Speaking of which, our Digital Commons Network continues to grow, with free access to research articles, books, dissertations, and other scholarly works.

All this and more awaits you in our newsletter. Check it out!
