

Hope Jordan

Trees at the Curve in the Road

From whip-thin sapling, layer by cellulose layer
Wood thickens to stone or what feels like stone
Minerals, light – the variable magic of weather
Root threads soak up rain, grain by grain

Wood thickens to stone or what feels like stone
Feels like concrete to my dad in the Mustang
Root threads soak up rain, grain by grain
His car bounced, wrapped around the tree

Feels like concrete to my dad in the Mustang
Trees use fungal webs to speak underground
His car bounced, wrapped around the tree
What did he hear as he lay comatose for 13 years

Trees use fungal webs to speak underground
From whip-thin sapling, layer by cellulose layer
What did he hear as he lay comatose for 13 years
Minerals, light—the variable magic of weather