YOUR

HORSES

Spring has arrived! It's now time to prepare a paddock rich in nutrients that can also reduce your horse's risk of laminitis.

Hello Jenny

September's here and you're most likely eager to prepare your horse pastures for sowing. As temperatures rise, the sugar level in grasses increases. This makes spring the best time to start on your paddocks, thereby minimising the risk of debilitating laminitis.

Choosing the best grass species for pastures is crucial, as no horse lover wants to expose his or her animal to the potential distress of laminitis. Studies show this disease is largely preventable by providing animals with a native grass diet low in certain starches and sugars.

At Native Seeds Pty Ltd we specialise in grasses that provide a high yield while limiting the possibility of disease. Oakey Wheat grass and Gallop Horse Pasture Seed Mixes for Northern Southern and Western areas are two products we often recommend for horse owners. In fact, our Gallop Horse Pasture Seed Mix is the ONLY true low-sugar horse pasture seed mix available in Australia.

Getting started with spring sowing is easy and all seed orders placed online on or before September 18 will receive a FREE Seedling ID Guide plus a Step-by-Step Guide on Growing the best Horse Pasture.

With over 20 years involvement with native grasses and our expert knowledge of the Australian environment and paddock requirements, we look forward to providing you with the right seeds for your pasture... the first time.

Carol
Native grass seed specialist

PS. Now we're in spring, it's the optimal time to sow your pastures. Order online before September 18 and get a free copy of our helpful guide to seeds and sowing. Your horse will thank you for it!
